Papplewick Pumping Station

Rigg Lane, Ravenshead, Notts NG15 9AJ

Britain's finest preserved Victorian fresh water pumping station opened in 1884, and was in continuous use supplying Nottingham with water until 1969. It is now an accredited museum and registered charity, and holds regular steam events throughout the year.

Brinsley Parish Council

Cordy Lane, Brinsley, Notts NG16 5BZ

Brinsley is an ancient settlement, mentioned in the Domesday Book as "Bruneslia", meaning Leys or meadows belonging to a lord named Brun, and a manor was established here in the reign of Edward the Confessor. The preserved tandem Headstocks are a reminder of Brinsley Colliery and the village's coal mining industry, and feature in the local nature reserve. The father of author DH Lawrence was a butty at the colliery, and other links to Lawrence include Vine Cottage, featured in Odour of Chrysanthemums and Quarry Cottage, home of his grandfather. Part of Old Brinsley is a Conservation Area, and with 29 footpaths around the village, it is a popular destination for walkers.

For further details see

www.brinsleypc.org.uk

Brinsley's Tandem Headstocks, situated in the Local Nature Reserve

This play, presented by Papplewick Pumping Station and Dragon Theatre, brings to life the story of the pumping station and the importance of clean water. Some of the characters portrayed, for example engineer Thomas Hawksley, really existed; others were based on former residents of the pumping station, whilst some were fictional.

Throughout July schoolchildren will visit the pumping station to enjoy the play, and we attended one of only two performances open to the public.

Various locations around the station were featured; including the greenhouse, Boiler House, Engine House, and the original underground Reservoir. It includes an explanation of why the station was needed – cholera was rife in the poor houses of Nottingham and clean water was too expensive for all but the better-off. Thomas Hawksley fought and won the battle to supply cheap water to Nottingham's increasing population.

In the engine room the beautiful steam machinery was shown and explained, likewise the massive boilers in the Boiler House. Going underground into the original reservoir, with its vaulted roof and beautiful brickwork, was like descending into a vast cathedral. An old wash-house took onlookers back to the time before washing machines made light of a previously hard, time-consuming task. Throughout the play simple songs were sung, and everyone encouraged to join in.

The play was enjoyed by children and adults alike, and the story included the tragedy of a fault which appeared in the wall of the reservoir – hence A Crack in Time

Church and Settlement Conference

Dates of Event

4th September 2015 –6th September 2015

This year's 2015 annual joint SCA/MSRG conference on 'Church and Settlement: rural churches and the medieval landscape' will be held at the University of Leicester from September 4th-6th. The theme centres around the early rural church foundations and their connections with their respective settlements – two categories which are too often kept separated, rather than integrated, in medieval studies. The conference will feature an assorted range of talks to address this theme, as well as a special evening tour of Leicester Cathedral and the new Richard III Heritage Centre on the Friday, and in-depth site tour of the nearby rural landscape of the Vale of Belvoir on the Sunday.

Speakers: John Blair, Emma Chapmen, Gareth Davies, Richard Jones, Aleks McClain, David Parsons

Rare Iron Age necklace returns home to Newark

After being kept safe by the British Museum one of the most important artefacts ever found in Nottinghamshire has returned home.

A 2,000 year old Iron Age Torc has gone on display at the National Civil War Centre in Newark just a few miles from where it was discovered on farmland in 2005 by local metal detectorist Maurice Richardson. The exquisite object – regarded by experts as one of the top two ever found in Britain – is made from gold and silver and would have been worn around the neck as the ultimate status symbol. Soon after it was found and declared treasure the Torc was bought by Newark and Sherwood District Council for £350,000 to preserve the area's heritage and prevent it from going overseas. It will now be housed in the new Civil War Centre. Other non Civil War objects on display include an Anglo Saxon gold cross, Roman remains and the Newark press used to print the first published poems of Lord Byron.

Admission is £7 adults, £6 concessions and £3 children.

Lunchtime Talk - Catherine Booth: Mother of The Salvation Army

Monday, 29th June 2015

1.00pm - 2.00pm

Free - booking required, William Booth Birthplace Museum / Salvation Army Complex, 14 Notintone Place, Sneinton, Nottingham NG2 4QG

In observation of the 150th anniversary of the founding of The Salvation Army, this talk by Danny Wells will explore the life, work, impact and legacy of Catherine Booth. Catherine Booth (nee Mumford) was fortified with the spirit and convictions of early 19th century rural Methodism of the Midlands. Having met a kindred spirit in William Booth of Nottingham, they were to take their pre-industrial Methodist creed into the religious and political fulcrum of the East End of London in the second half of the century.

The response of the Booths to the poverty, hunger, squalor and 'sin' that they observed all around them, was to create the Salvation Army as a 'Way out of Darkest England'. It became the fastest growing religious movement of late Victorian Britain and remains a religious and social service agency of international significance to this day.

Despite suffering from poor health throughout her life, Catherine raised eight children; developed a deep and profound knowledge of Christianity; proved to be a renowned orator and powerful advocate for her faith, and showed tremendous drive and fight in the founding and development of the Salvation Army. Have the 20th and 21st centuries neglected the achievements of this indomitable woman?

Booking: Please note that places for this talk are limited. To reserve a place, please e-mail wbbm@salvationarmy.org.uk or book online at: <http://lunchtime-talk-catherine-booth.eventbrite.co.uk> or call the Museum on 0115 979 3464.

William Booth: His Life and Legacy

Wednesday, 8th July 2015

1.00pm – 2.00pm

Free - booking required, William Booth Birthplace Museum, 14 Notintone Place, Sneinton, Nottingham NG2 4QG

William Booth is best-known as the founder and first General of The Salvation Army, and as the author the best-selling book, In Darkest England and the Way Out, in which he outlined his programme of social reform for the 'submerged tenth', the poorest section of the community, published in 1890, the year in which his beloved wife Catherine died.

How did this boy, born in the Nottingham suburb of Sneinton in 1829, become a celebrity on the world stage by 1912, when he died at the age of 83?

We trace his life from his home and family in Sneinton, his conversion at the Wesley Chapel in Nottingham, his apprenticeship and employment as a pawnbroker's assistant in Nottingham and London, his early Christian ministry in Lincolnshire, his service as a minister in the Methodist New Connexion, and his move to London in 1865, after several years as an independent evangelist.

We follow him through the formative years of his Christian Mission in East London, and its subsequent development into The Salvation Army, with an ever-widening circle of influence, as the movement spread around the world.

We review his life and work, and also how The Salvation Army has celebrated his life and kept alive his memory in the century since he died, and we also consider why Salvationists today are still drawing upon his legacy, a hundred years after he 'laid down his sword'.

Booking: Please note that places for this talk are limited. To reserve a place, please e-mail the Museum: wbbm@salvationarmy.org.uk or book online at: <http://lunchtime-talk-william-booth.eventbrite.co.uk> or call the Museum on 0115 979 3464.
