The Tin Tabernacle Trust

This has been set up to utilise a Tin Tabernacle built in 1903 but allowed for some years to fall into disrepair. It is intended to restore it for village use – as an Heritage/Archive Centre and village hall; a place for villagers to meet, and for groups to use. Sited next to King John's

Palace at Kings Clipstone, it has been used for archaeological field schools, and will be a facility for the use of archaeologists and historians as research continues.

Newark & District Young Archaeologists Club

Founded in 2001, this is the Nottinghamshire Branch of the Young Archaeologists Club. Meets monthly, with members from throughout Notts, aged between 8 and 16 years. Aim is to learn about archaeology and local history in a fun environment. Past projects include building Iron Age huts, an Anderson Shelter and a Viking Longship.

The Lenton Centre, Dunkirk & Lenton Partnership Forum

Lenton Priory was a Cluniac Monastery founded 1106 – 1107 in the city of Nottingham. Once famed for its elaborate architecture and annual Martinmas Fair, nothing now remains except a single column base. The Fair was a precursor to Goose Fair, still held annually in Nottingham. Archaeological work by Trent & Peak in 2012 in advance of the new tram network found substantial evidence of the Priory, now reburied, or to be displayed eventually at Nottingham's Brewhouse Yard.

The Industrial Revolution Academic Conference 2015

The Arkwright Society Academic Conference on the Industrial Revolution returns to Cromford Mills on Saturday 26 September 2015. This second Conference will be on the theme of Industrialisation and Society.

Leading British experts on the Industrial Revolution will set out their views on the time when Britain changed in every way, led by a new spirit of entrepreneurship and innovation:

Professor Stanley Chapman, (Nottingham University) will talk about the builders who helped Arkwright deliver the totally new type of industrial building needed for his machinery.

Dr John Stevenson (Oxford University) will discuss the role played by the radical political thinker of the Industrial Revolution, William Cobbett, and Professor Carolyn Steedman (Warwick University) will set out what it was like 'Living the Industrial Revolution'.

Seminars will also include a review of new thinking on the Cotton Triangle, the interrelationship between social and technological change and the social and industrial impact of machinery on nail making.

Please note that this year there is an early bird booking opportunity for concessions – Save £5 if you book before 1st September!

Places are expected to fill up fast so reserve your seat by calling Cromford Mills on 01629 823256

Follow us on Facebook: CromfordMills and Twitter @Cromford Mills for updates.

Home Front Legacy 1914–18

Recording First World War sites in the UK for community groups

The Home Front Legacy 1914–18 project is supporting community groups researching local places associated with the Great War with an online toolkit and guidance for recording the remains of surviving sites, structures and buildings around Britain.

Coordinated by the Council for British Archaeology the Project is working with Historic England and partners across the UK to help local communities identify and map the remains of the First World War Home Front.

The Home Front Legacy website provides you with the tools, guidance and resources for you to carry out archaeological recording and submit your data to your local Historic Environment Record and National Monuments Records. This collection of data is essential to enable our growth in knowledge and to inform future protection for sites.

They are inviting community group and individuals to get involved and we hope very much that the members of the Historical Association will take up the call from Home Front Legacy to use their expertise in this great project.

To help they are organising a series of regional day schools during the Autumn of 2015, you are invited to attend a day school, they are free and informative.

They have one planned for the East Midlands on the 3 October at Bingham near Nottingham.

You can find the full programme and booking details on the web site

www.homefrontlegacy.uk.org

The Battle of Hatfield Investigation Society (BOHIS) has been awarded £15,600 Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) support to explore and share the history of three villages on the Welbeck Estate, North Nottinghamshire.

The society's project aims to bring together local people from Cuckney, Norton and Holbeck to discover more about some of the key moments in the area's past.

Plans for the project include archaeology workshops in local schools and digitising a collection of images of Cuckney and the Welbeck Estate dating from between 1880 and 1940. There will also be training for volunteers in non-invasive archaeological techniques including Ground Penetrating Radar (GPR) and Magnetometry.

The volunteers will then use these new skills to investigate the grounds of St Mary's Church, Cuckney where the remains of Cuckney Castle are sited. It is hoped the work will help to determine the site(s) of the mass graves discovered in 1950 / 1951 which may relate to the Anglo-Saxon Battle of Hatfield (632 AD).

A Community Open Day will be held on the 26th September and onsite activities will take place between Monday 26th and Friday 30th October 2015.

Commenting on the award, Chairman Paul Jameson said, "We are delighted to have received the backing of the Heritage Lottery Fund and are confident the enterprise will bind local people together in a common purpose. We'd also like to express our appreciation to the Cuckney Village Hall committee for granting use of their facilities at a very minimal cost to support those taking part in the five on site days and the prior first Community Day".

Vanessa Harbar, Head of HLF East Midlands, said: "This area has an intriguing and untold history and this National Lottery investment will equip people with the skills to explore it."

The project was formally announced at their "kick off" barbeque on Saturday 18th July (see picture) which was attended by about 80 people and raised £415.

Electronic Publishing for All?

Publicity, publicity, publicity; to repeat a now-famous maxim. If you have some words to share, in today's electronic world, getting your own words online, into people's Kindles, iPads or distributed through Amazon are the ways to do it. Recent publishing surveys highlight the slow decline in sales of traditional books, steady rise in electronic versions but the meteoric rise in self-published titles. Don't forget, self-publishing could yield big financial returns! Do you want to find out more?

Clarborough & Welham IT Group have come together with local author, Kath Sutton, to promote her recent title, Clarborough & Welham since 1778. Kath's book project is funded by Sharing Heritage from the Heritage Lottery fund. The book was released in August 2015 in conventional 'hard copy' but in conjunction with Clarborough & Welham IT Group is looking to produce e-book versions for distribution through Amazon.

The IT Group has also taken first steps to launch an associated website (www.clarborough-welham1778.btck.co.uk) which will be designed to explore the methodology that Kath used – and reflections on their use – during researching and creating her book. This will be aimed at researchers/authors who may follow similar local history paths to Kath in the future. Currently, the vast majority of self-published e-books fall into the fiction or fantasy categories, so our project is groundbreaking too.

Both of these projects, e-book publishing and website development are in their infancy. We are looking to form a small group based on Clarborough & Welham IT Group's current provision to move these projects forward. This new group will be in addition to our usual groups which will continue as usual. The new group will include tuition in such key skills as conversion of word processed material into Kindle and iPad products, guidance on uploading such products to Amazon and related e-publishing topics. A second focus will be development of the above website. This will include not only structuring and developing the site content but also selecting relevant extracts from Kath's book to illustrate these themes. This latter task will not only involve critical analysis of Kath's book, but also extracting sections from our proof copy and conversion to pdf files which will be incorporated in the website.

An initial meeting, for anyone interested in getting involved in these projects, is scheduled for 15:15 on Tuesday 22nd September at Clarborough Village Hall. Anyone is welcome to this initial meeting although prior booking of your place would be appreciated. The meeting will start with a brief introduction by Kath Sutton before IT Group tutors explore possible ways forward for the group.

This could be of interest to anyone looking to develop any of the skills associated with e-publishing or website development as well as anyone with such skills who would like to help. For further information, or to pre-book your place at this initial meeting: Contact Greg on (01777) 700 918 or e-mail clarboroughwelham@gmail.com

Greasley church hall Saturday 3 October at 2.30pm

The son of a Polish nobleman, Von Hube was the vicar of Greasley from 1866 until 1907. From 1857 he served at Panmure German Mission in South Africa before returning to the UK. He wrote the book 'Griseleia', a history of the parish, and was the basis for characters in several works by D H Lawrence. During his retirement he lived in Nottingham and is buried in the Nottingham General Cemetery.

*He was a soldier once, our fierce little Baron- a Pole
Fleeing in exile to England at the end of the fight.
He was a soldier always; in church it was a sight
To see him flash and tremble with the fire of his soul.*
