A Bus Ride Round Attercliffe

By Mike Higginbottom

The first Bus Ride Round Attercliffe in April has sold out, and we're now taking bookings for a follow-up trip on Sunday June 30th 2019, starting at the former Penny Black pub, Pond Hill, across the road from the Sheffield Interchange. The idea came from the popular Walks Round Attercliffe that I've conducted as part of Heritage Open Days, which continue to be oversubscribed.

The Lower Don Valley – that is, the villages of Attercliffe, Carbrook and Darnall – was the powerhouse of Sheffield's heavy steel industry and was where many of its workers lived. Even though some of the remaining historic buildings are inaccessible to visitors, and much has gone altogether, there's still much to see. Indeed, because the Heritage Open Day walk takes two hours to cover less than a mile of the Attercliffe Road, I looked for an appealing way of driving around to show people more of the valley's rich heritage.

There will be stops at the secluded Zion Graveyard (opened 1805), Attercliffe Library (1894), now a splendid restaurant, and the English Institute of Sport (2003). If you'd like to explore Sheffield's industrial and working-class heritage while travelling in style on June 30th, please book at:

Nottingham Women's History Group Presents

Minnie Lansbury: Suffragette, Socialist and Rebel Councillor, with Janine Booth

Saturday 6th April 2019 at 2pm at the International Community Centre, 61B Mansfield Road NG1 3FN

Suggested donation £3 - NWHG events are open to all

This is a story of a remarkable young woman who became a popular champion and whose tragically early death broke the hearts of her family, friends, comrades and community. It is also the story of Eastern European immigrant Jews in Cockney London, of the fight against poverty and for enfranchisement, of opposing war while defending its victims, of embracing revolutionary possibilities and of defying bad laws.

Home Cooked Heritage

Exhibition

at West Bridgford Library

12 April – 30 May 2019, all day, at West Bridgford Library. Simply turn up and take part. We look forward to seeing you!

How do you bring archive materials, 120 school children, 50 adults, a story teller, an artist and an archaeologist together in one project? FOOD! Exploring the heritage of recipes unearthed in Nottinghamshire Archives, a celebration of food stories, past and present have become a sea of tea towels showcasing creative responses to this HLF Shared Heritage project.

Home Cooked Heritage is Heritage Lottery Funded programme that has seen children and adults creatively explore the theme. The exhibition of archive materials and contemporary responses is touring library galleries and will then be added back into Nottinghamshire Archives for future food historians to uncover.

Nottinghamshire Archives is a fabulous resource open to the public and holding over 4 million documents waiting to be discovered.

We have been delighted to work with James Wright FSA, Clare Taylor and Nicky Rafferty on this Heritage lottery project alongside Bilsthorpe Flying High Academy and Greenwood Primary and Nursery School.
